Established in 1907, Daihatsu Motor Co., Ltd. is one of Japan's leading automotive manufacturers. Known then as Hatsudoki Seizo Co., Ltd., it specialized in the production of internal combustion engines. By 1930, it made history by being the first Japanese automaker to manufacture the first three-wheeled car.

Daihatsu has pioneered the production of a low cost, high quality, electric car. With its first prototype introduced in 1966, it continued to develop its technology and has successfully unveiled the Hijet model, an electric three wheeler, in Chicago's 1977 International Electric Vehicle Expo.

After its merger with Toyota in November 1967, Daihatsu constantly improved its small passenger cars which today have been successfully sold to more than 120 countries. Since then, it added to its product line utility vehicles and trucks with a long term focus on research and development assisted by Japan's Environment Agency.

On its 108th year, Daihatsu is known as one of Japan's top 10 automotive producers with a passion for innovation- living up to its mission of "creating small cars that are loved by people the world over."
